

Your article is in the top 100 for *Scientific
Reports

Dear Nan Yao,

We are delighted to announce that your research article 'Natural quasicrystal with decagonal symmetry' received 7,081 article views in 2015, placing it as one of the top 100 read Scientific Reports articles in 2015.

Scientific Reports published almost 11,000 papers in 2015, and so a position in the top 100 most highly read articles is an extraordinary achievement – your science is a credit to you, and of real value to the research community.

What next?

- The Scientific Reports team will be promoting your article in the coming weeks via the journal's social media channels
- You can spread the word of your achievement with this official top 100 badge – great for use in email signatures and presentations, as well as on social media and personal websites

We would like to thank you for your contribution to Scientific Reports and very much hope you will consider publishing with us again.

Best wishes,

Richard White, PhD
Editorial Manager, *Scientific
Reports*

Suzanne Farley, PhD
Executive Editor, *Scientific
Reports*

*According to nature.com web analytics, covering 2015